Steven and Martin,

We were provided with both of your names and contact information by Michael Hoppe at your HQ as the local EPA points of contact for this spill. I heard about this last night on the news here in Colorado and wanted to know if Verizon Wireless can be of any assistance.

<http://www.inquisitr.com/2316717/animas-river-in-colorado-turned-orange-closed-due-to-accidental-waste-spill-by-epa/>

1) First of all, we have a local Verizon Emergency Response Team (VCRT) and that can help with coverage and additional devices at sites where you will have a large concentration of personnel, a command post if you will. There is an 800# on the attached flyer that goes to a local team here in Colorado that can help with that. This service is provided at no charge to the Federal Government.

2) Secondly, EPA will want to be monitoring the site and EPA has been using cradlepoint routers/modems along with monitoring devices to test air, water, and soil in other areas with these HazMat sites around the country. Let me know if you need more information on that and we can get that from our national team and your HQ.

If you are not part of the team responding to this crisis, could you let me know who would be a good person for me to reach out to?

Thanks.

Jason,

I don't know if there is a need but these two are listed on the contacts for that response.

Mike,

I just saw the information about the spill on the Animas River in Colorado. Does EPA need any assistance from Verizon of any kind in response to this incident? Do you know who the local OSC's are in that area so I can extend any assistance they may need?

Regards,
